CONFERENCE NEWS & NOTES

Oklahoma, West Virginia and Texas are still in the mix for a berth in the Dr Pepper Big 12 Football Championship Game. Following are the tiebreaker scenarios depending on the outcome of this week's final games.

Oklahoma Finishes at 8-1 and Texas finishes at 7-2
With a win over West Virginia and the best win percentage in conference games, OU earns the No. 1 seed (home team) in the championship game.

Oklahoma and West Virginia tie at 7-2
Both would qualify for the championship game with WVU earning the No. 1 seed (home team) via a win over OU.

Oklahoma, West Virginia and Texas tie at 7-2
WVU and UT would earn the championship game berths as both would have wins over OU. WVU would have the No. 1 seed (home team) via a win over Texas.

There isn't a tougher road to a conference championship than the one in the Big 12, verified by the 2018 championship game participants coming down to the final week of games. Each team must play the other nine in the regular season and the title game is the only conference championship contest that guarantees the conference's two best teams play each other.

Since the Big 12 moved to a full-round robin schedule model in 2011, only one team (Oklahoma - 2016) over eight seasons has gone undefeated in conference play.

The balance in the Big 12 has never been more apparent than in the 2018 conference season. In addition to the top four teams within two games of each other, the next five teams are all currently tied for fifth place.

Conference teams continue to protect their home field as the Big 12 still leads the autonomy leagues in conference home win percentage at .667 (26-13).

19-of-40 (47.5%) Big 12 games have been decided by 8-or-less points.

The Big 12 is first among the FBS conferences in smallest margin of victory in league games at 13.6 points.

After posting a 21-7 non-conference mark in early September, Big 12 teams have not had a break from league play since September 22.

Oklahoma, West Virginia, Texas, Iowa State and Oklahoma State are bowl eligible. The winner of the Baylor vs. Texas Tech game will become bowl eligible and two other teams also remain in contention. The Big 12 has seven guaranteed bowl spots.
